Profile

Kevin W. Boyle is an associate with Marks, O'Neill, O'Brien, Doherty & Kelly's Philadelphia office. He is admitted to practice in Pennsylvania and is a member of the Philadelphia and Pennsylvania Bar Associations.

Kevin graduated from Johns Hopkins University in 2012, with a degree in Public Health. He continued his education at Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health the following year, obtaining a Master's Degree in Environmental Health Science in 2013. He then attended Temple University's Beasley School of Law, graduating in 2016. During law school, he was recognized as a Rubin Public Interest Fellow for his pro bono work.

In law school, he interned at the Legal Clinic for the Disabled and the school's senior law clinical. Prior to joining Marks O'Neill, Kevin worked at an insurance defense firm doing medical malpractice, long-term care defense, and health care law.

Since joining Marks O'Neill, Kevin has primarily defended clients in professional liability actions.

Outside of work, he enjoys playing golf and any other activity that lets him spend time outside.
