Profile

Christopher (Chris) Caiazzo has been practicing law for over twenty-five years representing clients in all aspects of general liability, New York Labor Law, professional liability, medical device litigation and malpractice defense. He is a highly experienced litigator who has successfully received multiple jury defense verdicts in New York courts. Chris is admitted to practice in New York and Connecticut.

Over the course of his career, Chris has worked for several well-known New York insurance defense firms, where he was responsible for all phases of defense litigation from initial pleadings through discovery and trial. He supervised and managed all aspects of a diverse caseload including, but not limited to, premises liability, personal injury, general liability, labor law and property damage through and including trials and appeals.

Chris has authored multiple articles including “Buying Your Peace, The Use of New York General Obligation Law 15-108 To Settle Out In A Multiple Defendant Litigation,” and “Understanding The Timely Notice Provisions of New York Insurance Law.”
