Profile

Megan Wilson is an Associate with Marks, O'Neill, O'Brien, Doherty, & Kelly. She is admitted to practice in New Jersey.

Megan graduated cum laude from Rosemont College with a bachelor's degree in English Literature and Secondary Education. She also received a master's degree in Education and Administration. Megan later attended Drexel University's Thomas R. Kline School of Law.

During law school, Megan interned for the Honorable Timika Lane as a judicial intern in the First Judicial District of Philadelphia during her 2L year. She also interned for the Philadelphia Public Defender's Office during her 3L year.

Prior to joining Marks O'Neill, Megan clerked for the Honorable Lillian Harris Ransom in the First Judicial District of Philadelphia. After her clerkship, Megan handled workers compensation matters for a regional defense litigation firm.

Since joining Marks O'Neill, Megan has focused her practice on matters involving professional liability, employment law, and casualty liability claims.

Outside of work, Megan enjoys spending time with her family, hiking, and listening to her favorite podcasts.
